Name : Abbas Parwaz
ID : FA19 BECE 2004
Section : (Jm)

QUIZ 3

QUESTION :

Haya, Jihad and the Islamic Brotherhood are three fundamental concept in the islamic faith. These Principles are essential to understanding the Islamic way of life and the moral and ethical code that governs Muslim society. Haya is an Arabic term that refers to modesty, shyness, and humility. It is a fundamental principle in Islamic teachings and is considered a virtue that all muslims should strive a cultivate in their character. Haya encompasses many different aspects of life, including the way Muslim dress, interact with others and conduct themselves in public and private setting. It is a quality that is highly valued in islamic societies and is seen as a means of promoting social harmony and moral integrity. Jihad on the other hand, is an Arabic term that means struggle or effort. It is often associated with armed conflict but in Islamic teachings, it has a broader meaning. Jihad can refer to any struggle that is undertaken in the name of islam, whether it be a physical or spiritual struggle. The concept of Islamic brotherhood is central to the islamic faith. Muslims believe that they are all brothers and sisters in faith and should treat each other with kindness, respect and compassion. The bond of islamic brotherhood is seen as a means of promoting social cohesion and unity within the Muslim community. It is an important principle that guides Muslim behavior and is emphasized throughout Islamic teachings.

The basic elements of culture include

Language: This is the system of communication used by a group or society.

Religion: This refers to the beliefs and practices of a society regarding the supernatural, including the existence of deities, rituals and ceremonies.

Arts and literature: This includes visual arts and literature.

The family plays a crucial role in the socialization of individuals in Islamic society. Parents are responsible for teaching their children the values, morals and ethics of islam. The family provides a stable and nurturing environment for children to grow and develop. This helps to build strong and healthy individuals who can contribute positively to society.